Feng Shui Owen Sound - The oriental concept of Feng Shui literally translates to "wind and water." This complicated concept is more easily understood than it is defined or pronounced. Feng Shui must be experienced so as to fully comprehend its ramifications on the human spirit. The elusive energy known as chi is ever existing and surrounds the meaning and the application of Feng Shui. Even though it is intangible, chi is all over in the world and is considered one's aesthetic periphery. Feng Shui reveals itself in our outlook regarding landscape and regarding life. It is the framework we place either unconsciously or consciously all-around our lives.

According to the customs in the Orient, object positioning like for instance furniture, buildings and graves is based on the patterns established all through the flow of yin and yang and chi. Together, yin and yang energies create both negative and positive effects. Feng Shui is made up of five elements. These elements are earth, wood, water, metal and fire. They combine in their own specific ways in order to produce either positive or destructive cycles. In order for optimum Feng Shui to be acquired within whatever room, all of the five elements would be involved without being overpowered by whatever one of them individually.

Like for instance, if metal elements like modern furniture pieces dominate an area, the effect can be balanced by introducing wood elements to the room like green plants. Candles can also be included so as to form the fire component. When applying Feng Shui as a design feature within anybody's home, it is important to use natural substances whenever possible. The double aspects of yin and yang always reign supreme in Feng Shui because the ultimate purpose is to produce a harmonious balance amongst natural things and human beings.

Bedrooms are very important rooms inside any house and it is vital to have sufficient energy flow to them. This is key to the energy flow throughout the rest of the home. Beds themselves are believed to have power positions also. Several ancient Asian philosophy believe that the energy from somebody who ever slept in a bed leaves a residue. For optimum Feng Shui, how the bed is placed with regards to the bedroom door has to be considered. The door should always be visible from the bed. If the door is not visible from the bed, anyone can make use of a mirror in such a way that it will reflect the door. This will restore Feng Shui.

Feng Shui connects life and landscape together and all things in life depend on each other. The Oriental way of thinking believes the landscape is a breathing and living entity. There are lots of aspects concerning humanity and heaven and earth that the Western world can consider as people in the east do. Just as Shakespeare said in Hamlet, "There are more things in heaven and earth, my dear Horatio, than are dreamt of in your philosophy."
